KEY POINTS: SPANISH QUESTION WORDS

- Question words in Spanish always have an accent mark on one of their vowels.
- The accent mark distinguishes question words from other types of words, such as conjunctions, relative pronouns, adverbs, and adjectives.
- Questions in Spanish are surrounded by two question marks.
- When asking for someone's name in Spanish, you must use '¿cómo?'.
- To form questions in Spanish, you do not need an auxiliary verb, and you can omit the subject pronoun.
- Questions about personal information use 'cuál' instead of 'qué' to say 'what'.
- Interrogative words followed by prepositions seek more specific information.
